Appendix A

Security Review Criteria

From a security standpoint, is the location safe for the planned event, taking into account the nature of the planned activity, the size of the planned event, and the physical characteristics of the location?

Have adequate security arrangements been made or agreed to, taking into consideration the nature of the planned event?

Is the planner prepared to meet required costs? (Note that the planner may only be charged for security costs associated with invited or expected participants in the event, and not costs arising from counter-protestors)

Is the nature of the event such that approval of or coordination with other jurisdictions is necessary?

Is there objective evidence that the requestor has engaged in true threats or expression directed to provoke imminent lawless action, or has engaged in harassment that is so severe, pervasive and subjectively and objectively offensive that it effectively denies access to an educational opportunity or benefit provided by a state-supported institution of higher education or similar entity, such that it is reasonably foreseeable that that same conduct will occur as part of the proposed event?

Can any security risks be addressed through adjustments to time, location, or similar aspects of the event that will allow the expression to occur in a timely and effective manner?

If Security arrangements are determined to be necessary, UAPD will furnish a summary of proposed arrangements and costs to be charged to the organizer. Any security costs will be based on projected security costs associated with invited or expected guests. Security costs should be based on standard rates to be charged to organizing entities, which may be updated from time to time.
